SITUATION SUMMARY

Natural Gas Leak, Stockton, San Joaquin County

On 09/25/14 at 1436 hours the California State Warning Center was notified of an underground 4 inch natural gas pipeline that ruptured at the intersection of Pershing Ave. and Brookside Rd. in Stockton, San Joaquin County. The rupture resulted in the release of an unknown amount of natural gas through manholes and underground vents. The line break occurred near the University of the Pacific (UoP) and Stagg High School as well as several apartment complexes.

- The Cal OES Fire Duty Officer advises that there are no injuries reported.
- PG&E is on scene and has slowed the release by clamping. They anticipate having the flow shut down at approximately 1830 hours and estimate it will be (3) hours of work to replace/repair the broken pipe.
- PG&E detected natural gas in the drinking water during probe testing; however, CalWater has been to the site, tested the drinking water, and detected no contamination.
- All corners of the intersection were evacuated; however, as of 1730 hours there is only (1) building evacuated. In approximately (1) hour all evacuations should be lifted and the last building may be repopulated. This will be in coordination with the successful PG&E flow shutdown.
- There are no requests for assistance or unmet needs.
- Cal OES Fire, Law, and Inland Region personnel are monitoring the situation and providing updates as they become available.

Evacuations and Unknown Odor in Mountain View, Santa Clara County (FINAL)

- At 1919 hours on 9/24, the California State Warning Center (CSWC) became aware of an evacuation of three “4-plex” apartment buildings due to an unknown odor. Local Mountain View Police Department reported that two deceased individuals were discovered in a residence with a bucket full of chemicals including Lime Sulfur Dip and Sulfuric Acid in an apparent suicide. A total of 11 other apartments in the same building and adjacent buildings were evacuated. The evacuation order was lifted at 0800 hours. There are no requests for State Assistance.

SITUATION SUMMARY

Northern California Weather of Concern

- A Pacific storm will move over Northern California today linger through the weekend. This will bring cooler temperatures, widespread precipitation, and a chance of thunderstorms. Precipitation over the Coastal Range and western Shasta mountains will spread east today. The system remains over the area through the weekend and will continue to produce lingering showers before exiting the region. Light snow is possible over the highest peaks of the Sierra south of highway 50 on Saturday.
- The slow progression eastward of the low pressure system will result in a slow onset of rainfall for interior Northern California. Current projected precipitable water values associated with the system are around 1.25 to 1.50 inches with the frontal band.
- There are burn scar areas receiving 1/3 of an inch of rain an hour for consecutive hours so there is concern about flash flooding and debris flows in those areas into this evening.
- The recent mudslide on Mt. Shasta near the town of McCloud could result in more mudslides as portions of Siskiyou County received in excess of 2" of rain last night. Medford Weather and Siskiyou County Sheriff's Office advised that as of 0700 hours on 09/25/14 there were no reported impacts.
- Showers are expected to spread east and south through today and reach the Sierras this morning. By Friday, showers will continue and instability from the storm will increase such that thunderstorms may also develop, especially over the mountains. Main rainfall should remain north of I-80. Winds will continue to be fairly strong over the Sierra ridges and higher terrain today, but will be accompanied by periods of rain showers and higher humidity values. Possibility of an inch or two of snow over the Sierra south of Tahoe at an elevation of 8000 feet and above.
- Best chance of thunderstorms is today with lingering showers possible through the weekend.
- Temperatures 5 - 10 degrees below normal.
- Rain timing:
 - Over the Coastal Range and western Shasta mountains late this afternoon spreading eastward through this morning. Showers lingering through the weekend.
- Rain amounts:
 - 1/3-2/3" in the Coastal Range, Shasta/Plumas Mountains, and 4000'+ Sierra Nevada. 1/4 - 1/2" in the foothills below 4000'. 01-.20" in the Valley. Substantially higher amounts between 2-3" for extreme northwestern California.
- Snow timing:
 - Saturday over the southern Sierra (south of Highway 50) above 8000 feet.
- Snow amount:
 - 1-3 inches above 8000 feet.

Cal EOC Incident – 2014 Drought

- SOC / Inland REOC remains activated in support of 2014 Drought

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

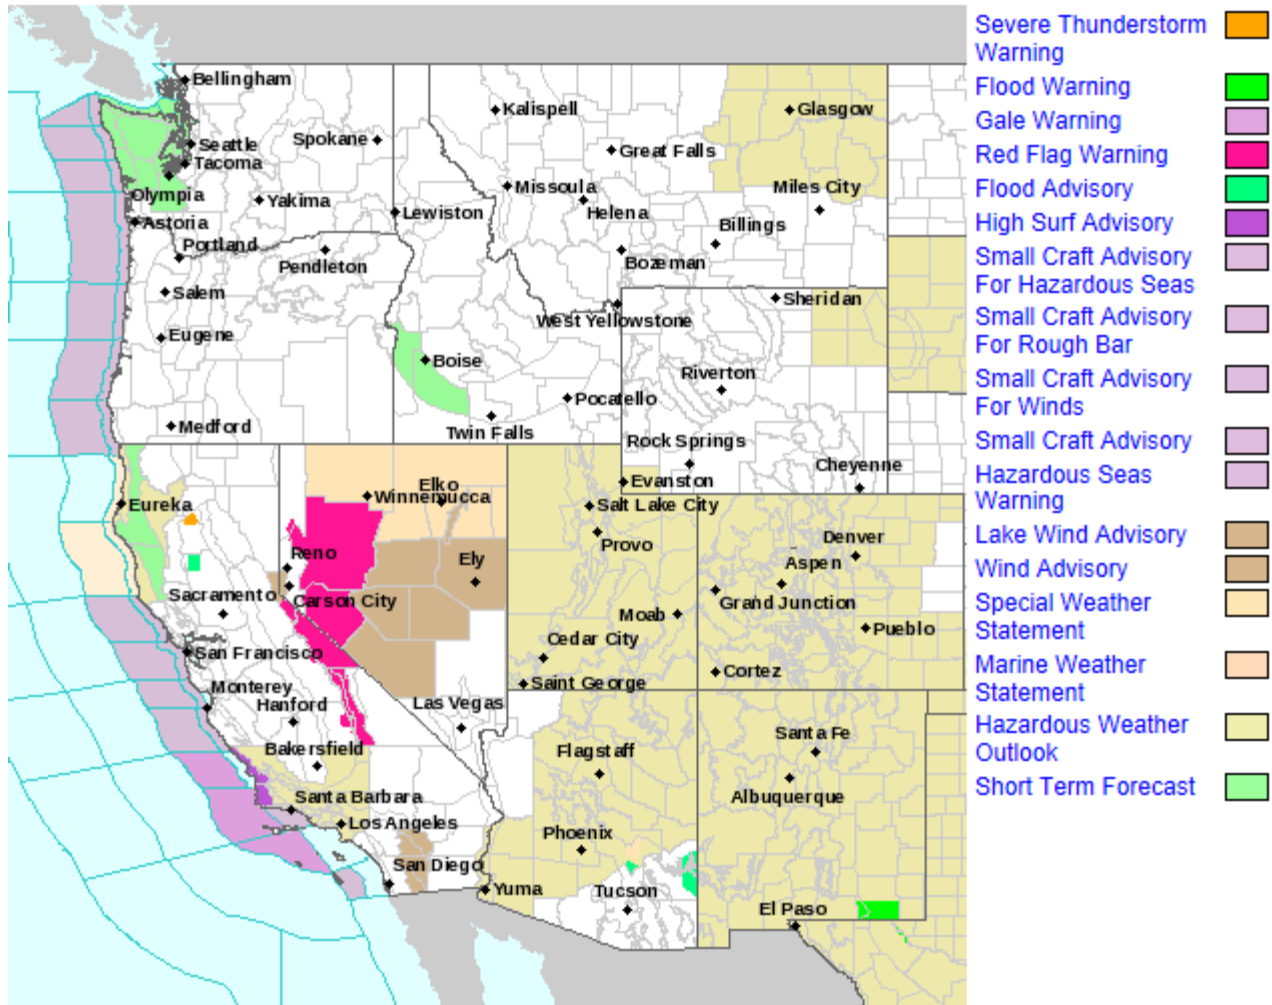

Strong low pressure moving onshore has already produced 1-3 inches of rainfall across most of Northwest California into the Northern Sacramento Valley & adjacent foothills, with about 0.25-0.75 inches in most other areas. Only areas not receiving significant rain yet are the Sierra Crest area into the Eastside, but rain will be moving into those areas later today as well. Cool, wet and unsettled weather will continue across Northern California through Friday in all areas, with the Sierra/Cascades and far eastern areas seeing lingering moisture and showers into this weekend. On the back side of this low there will be moderate northeast/offshore winds across the Coastal Range this weekend with a warming/drying trend. This warming and drying overspreads all areas early next week as Pacific high pressure approaches.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

A cold front marching through the state this morning will continue to bring rain to the northern third of the state with windy conditions further south. Most of the rain will remain north of the district, but some light showers will be possible over Monterey County and the Sierras north of Yosemite National Park. Rainfall in these areas will be under a quarter of an inch. Elsewhere, the front will cause winds to become quite strong from the Sierra Crest eastward into adjacent areas of Inyo and Mono Counties. Southwest winds of 20-30 mph with gusts to 45 mph will be common across these areas, while south winds of 15-25 mph with gusts to 40 mph can be expected across the floor of the Owens Valley. Minimum relative humidity may reach the 10-15% range in areas east of the Sierra Crest, especially from 6,000 to 9,000 feet. Temperatures today will still be warm ahead of the front, but most of the coastal areas as well as Central California will see temperatures 5-10 degrees cooler than yesterday. Friday, winds will be weaker over the Sierras and adjacent areas, but widespread southwest winds of 20-30 mph with gusts to 45 mph can be expected over the deserts. Friday and Saturday will be the coolest days of the period as highs only reach the lower 80s in the valleys to the upper 60s along the coast and in the mountains. Deep marine layer coverage may result in drizzle near the higher terrain from Los Angeles County southward. A weak low pressure area may stall out over the central part of the state Friday night and Saturday, resulting in isolated showers and one or two wet thunderstorms over the Sierras. The far eastern deserts near the Arizona border may see numerous wet thunderstorms Saturday afternoon. As this low pulls east of the area Saturday night, north winds of 15-25 mph with higher gusts will be possible in Santa Barbara County and the I-5 Corridor. Next week, a ridge off the coast will likely lead to very warm and dry conditions. By next Wednesday, highs will approach 100 in the valleys with warm weather likely all the way to the coast. Weak offshore flow may keep relative humidity recovery poor each night next week.
